Honegone, August 7rm; 1871. A currous illustration of the difference in the British Nation is justly proud. It is understood that the number of persons to be respued genius of Western nations and China with amounts to no less than 400, officers and mon, blue juckets and marines combined. The Mdregard to the question of the treatment due to aliens, is to be found in the history of the to the Commander of the Tenser, and the two laws in England applicable to foreigners who resort to the country-for the purposes of trading. It is often urged as an excuse for the backwardness of China in accepting the enlightened principles of modern times, that those principles are of comparatively modern date even among ourselves, and that it is, therefore, unreasonable for us to be too hard upon China because she happens not yet to have attained to them. But in the manuer in which the treatment of aliens has for ages been regarded by European nations, we have ] a strong illustration that the exclusiveness | $25 for one mouth which characterises the policy of the Chinese. there is something quite peculiar to the nation; and to which at least no parallel can be found in European countries. It is a curious fact that actually before the time of Magna Charta the question of permitting defendant of taking some movey out of bis aliens to reside in England for the purposes of trade has been thoroughly discussed, and favour of the permission being granted. We read in "Smith's Mercantile Law," that a friendly Alien may trade in the country as freely as any British subject, and that his safety while doing so is the basis of a special clause in Magua Charta. In order to enable him to trade with more ease and advantage he was permitted to hold a lease for years of a house, for " without habitation he cannot merchandize or trade." The reason which is assigned in Magna Charta for granting the permission is curiously enough the very one July, and remanded without evidence to the Chinese Sollen on Retailer of any quantity of which has long been energetically urged by the Shanghai and Hongkong Chambers of for a farther remand, and that one Wong Atni, to be good and sufficient prime facts evidence Commerce in favour of the conclusion that his appearance. This was done, and the case for the same, so as to support a conviction for the disputed clauses (the ninth and twelfth) was set down for the 5th instant. Seven years have elapsed since the above arguments were used, and we are is still withheld upon a variety of pleas; and they have adhered to a dictum of EARL Russers, that on the principle of "expression unius exclusio alterius" the specification of the treaty ports as places where foreigners could trade clearly showed that there was no intention of permitting them to do so in the Qo, gave some unimportant evidence. This hour, this confidence; and this pride have grown up slowly but surely from the admirable behaviour of a long line of emipent men who have placed the English Beach above every doubt. The tradition of that Bench is apotless rectitude; its custom is to be pure and beyond suspision : and these noble attributes; founded by great legal worthies whose names adorn British history are preserved in blameless integrity by the law. Buch a fact is one which other countries regard as a most enviable phenomenon; and ils social value is inosiculable; for se long as and political order are upheld by the spontaneous co-operation of the people. Nor west he Lord Maybr wrong in describing the admitted uprightness of a national Bench as "one of the groutest blessings of civilization. How, then, is such priceless uprightness founded and established The answer lies in the great and paramount fact that every order in our English community. literally from the Sovereign to the humblest voter in the land, has joined in vindicating and supporting the supreme ruler of all-the Lisw. That special characteristic of our national life accounts at once for our power, our peace, and in loyalty to the principle which forms the encred abield alike of anthority and freedom In the very heart of society, moulded by our use and wont, has grown up through ages the common law of the land; we have enlarged and extended it in the council of the nation. with the open concurrence of King, Lords, and Commone; and, the law being so made, we obey it scarcely so much as understanding the man who pretends to act "distoyally" to this accept of ed compact. If the law be wrongly made, if it be proved in this or that point to have grown obsolete we alter or amend it; but the recognised law, while it is unaltered, binds swhen we know what it says, neither plaintiff nor defendant asks to go further. And this broad fact defines and explains what an English Judge should be. It is clear that he should make himself the tongue by which the silent Statute speaks, the living syllogiam by which the priciples laid down apply to the case under hearing. It is his duty to assist the Court in bringing forth. disheneurs justice as a slight impurity fouls a corrow; the exact words of the Judge who thus tentured to speak at the dinner thele of that grave problem of right and wrong which is 'entrusted to him in banco." The Lord Mayor, said Chief-Justice Bovill; " had been pleased to refers to the very arduous trial in which, un-catastrophe they constitute a clear contempt of Court bugarded by the Court itself. If, at this stage of the proceedings, any public journal or public man had attered these words. Chief Just on Bovill would have been justified in committing the publisher or the speaker; and yet while all English journals are showing an admirable deference to role, and while, in apite of the extreme interest which the trial awakens, no remark abroad is allowed to interrupt its due and legal course, his Lordship does not think it homomethus to flaunt the whole question, in a speech pronounced among the Mansion House decembers! It is, of course, a matter of perfect indifference to the public or which side in the gase, or with what daimus, those most reprehensible words were used; enough that, if intelligible, they are culpably promature. Therein—to use the very mildest phrase—lies their exceeding impropriety; and we would to Heaven, for the sake of that "un-spotted honour and unfailing integrity" upon which the Lord Mayor descanted, that the untoward expressions could either be disowned, as baving been erroneously reported, or ex-tenuated into some signification which would not stain the ermine of justice or break those precious traditions of the dignity and circum spection which exalt our Bench.

Henri Rochelort has made his will, and I consulted a lawyer as to the best means of preventing his title, "Comte de Rochefort Lucay." rom becoming extinct. ORINESS YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASsociaTion .- A Booisty, under the above title, has been organized, and forty Colestials have joined the Association. The Rev. Mr. Loomis, the Chinese Missionery, is at the head of the date. organization. Services are held at the Association's headquarters every Sabbath.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE. AUGUST 5TH. EVENING. The market for Bengal drug, Patna, has been 31st December last. very unsteady and irregular in price, under active speculative influence. Sales of Patna Partner therein on the let January. having been affected at $6574 to $6611, on time due 22nd instant, against bargain chop soripe upon a valuation of $6571 to $670, with $40 to $10 a chest earnest money on cash terms, but very little was done. Benares has been placed at, 8630 to $635 on credit, a few chests only: consumptive demaid still continues to be very limited, owing to high rates. Telegrame have been received from Calcutta to the 5th instant, giving the result of the 8th. Government auc-Patna averaging about Rupses 1,384 latest for itabout Rupees 1,398. Benares averaged Rupecs 1,330 per chest. Exports to all ports are expected to be large, batween 4,200 and 4,500 chests. On receipt of the above intelligence, the market closed weak, Patna at $6564 to $6574 on time, and $6424 for the 8th sale. No change in Malve.

There has been a further fall in the value of Bengal drug. Fatna has declined to $655. Benards, $625 to $6272, with sellers, on cash terms, but no buyers. A telegram dated Galle, the 1st instant, gives the departure of the French mail steamer Neva for Hougkong with more or less 600 obests Bengal drug, due here on or about the 15th instant, to be followed by the English mail steamer due about the 21st, with a still larger supply. The very intelligence of the supply by the French mail bas been quite a damper upon the market, and has been a great disappointment to many of the speculators, who have been bolstering up the market for Patna to $667; under a delusion that the entire quantity of the drug by her will be left behind at Galle, and which some of the opinm brokers and operators for high prices, most studiously circulated among the Chinese dealers, thereby keeping up the value of the drug by large speculative parchases on time. The large holders, who were very reluctant to part with their drug, appear to be now in the market to meet offers readily; there cannot, under such circumstances be two opinions, that the market is bound to decline further before long AUGUST 7TH, MORNING! Patna $6532 to $655, sellers, cash and on time; Benares $625 to $630, oach sellers; Patha 8th sales on time, $635 to $636f, sellers. No change in Malwa.

The Original Mrs. Partington. The names of certain great characters are so well known to fame that often little or nothing elne is known about them. Homer is in danger of having been born in several different places at once. Shakepeare's early history is equally nnauthoritative. Nobody really knows wh old Parr was some aceptical people helieving that after all he was only some humbug who pretended to be a great deal older than be really was. And who was Mrs. Partington The old lady's moltreatment of the English language is proverbial. It may not be uninteresting, then, to know something of the old lady horself. The original Mrs. Partington was a respectable old lady, living in Sidmouth in Dovonshire. Her cottage was on the beach, and the incident on which her fame is based best told in a passage from the speach of Sydand found myself surrounded by an admiring ney Smith, at Taunton, in the year 1831, on the Lord's rejection of the Reform bill : "The attempt of the Lorde to stop the progress of reform, reminds me very forcibly of the great atorm at Sidmouth and of the conduct of excellent Mrs. Partington on that occasion. In the Winter of 1824 there set in a great flood upon that town, the tide rose to an incredible height, the waves rushed in upon the houses, and everything was threatened with destruction. In the midst of this sublime and terrible storm Dame Partington, on the beach, was seen a the door of her house, with mop and pattens trandling ber mop, squeezing out the sea water and vigoronely pushing away the Atlantic Ocean. The Atlantic was roused. Mrs. Partington's spirit was up. But I need not tell you that the contest was nucqual. The Atlanlowers, and are ready for our walk?" I started tic Ocean beat Mrs. Partington. She was excellent at a slop or puddle; but the should not have meddled with a tempest." This speech is reprinted in the corrected edition of Sydney Smith's works; and this is, we believe, the first time of Mrs. Partington's name being mentioned. The immortality she has carned must be net down as due to Sydney Smith. Once a

One balmy day in June started off for a walk with the girls, and soon got out into the open, but a tempting little copes attracted me, and the children dragged me thither, saying that it swarmed with wild flowers. Nothing loth, I yielded to their genthe guidence, and soon found myself in the shady recesses of the wood, reclining on a mossy bank, and the girls romping around me. "But, girls, this is not walking." I feelly remonstrated. " Lie quiet, you dear Papa, and we shall commence our walk immediately," so putting my arms under my head, and pulling my wide awake over my face, I commenced my Taking a turn in the road, I saw a country man lying on a bank; he had on a smack frock, cords, and bobnailed boots, and a wide-awake, with a torn brim, was over his face. Again the same rapid flight, and delicious repose, which was interrupted this time in another fashion, how I could never discover, but the result was that I fell into a rice field with a tremendous splash, scaring away the labourers, who fled in great alarm. After recovering from the shock of the fall, thought it curious that rice fields should exist on Hampstead Heath; then I reflected that my children must have gone home, and that dinner was long since over, therefore there was no pecessity for any burry on my part, the more so, as my bed was soft and comfortable, though rather cold. Yielding to these thoughts, and being profoundly ignorant as to my where abouts, I fell asleep,

He was on a visit to a friend in the Madrau Presidency, when the said friend was aummoned to a more northern station on matters of moment. Before leaving. be said to Macleane: "My dear friend. I want to consign to your care a pet of mine, a female monkey. I have so high an opinion of her qualities, that I have appointed her as guardian to four little puppies, who are orphans. I hope, joking apart, that you will not mind my leaving ber tied up in the corner of the room in which you write." As soon as his friend had taken his departure, a black servant entered the room in which Macleane was, and placed in one corner of it a large wooden stand, with a perch on it, and a broad ledge under it. My lady monkey on her seat, and looked arolled on every eide with an air of no small importance. She was evidently fully sensible of the responsibility involved in the guardianship of the pupe. Macleane, though much engrossed with the matter he had on hand (be was writing for the local paper, of which he was editor), could not restat an occasional glance at the demure self-sufficiency of the monkey, and also at her grotesque mode of enforcing descipling on her refractory protoges. As she had business of her own to attend to -viz, the demolition of aundry nuts, which had been put before her; and, as she had no notion of allowing her meal to be interrupted by the freaks of her baby charges, she clapped the tail of one under her towards the north; of another towards the south; of another towards the east: of a fourth towards the west; so that if any one of them, wishing to indulge a truant disposition," contrived, by wriggling, to extricate its tail from beneath its guardian's coat, it was promptly caught up, and alapped, and the tail reinstated in its proper quarters. The next day, while Macleane was engaged in the same pursuit as before, a native servant, with a small batchet, came in to dook the ears and tails of the puppies. On the unwelcome visitor boldly withdrawing one of the little ones from the monkey's hind-quarters, she protessed indignantly against his atter disregard. of her authority.
